

Social Media Giants Team Up and Vow to Ban Alt Media and Free Speech (Videos)

By Voice of Reason ·

Unbeknownst to the vast majority of Americans who go about their lives in a zombified state existing somewhere between clueless and misinformed, right now figurative lines in the sand are being drawn, and both sides are digging in for the fight of our lifetime. Will the United States remain a republic with even an inkling of the rights our Founders envisioned for us, or will the country fall to socialism, and a totalitarian eventuality??? For the latter to prevail, free speech must be stomped out.

The weapon of choice for liberty's greatest enemy is “political correctness.” There is an enormous movement afoot both in Europe, and here at home domestically, for all the social media giants to stomp out what they are calling “hate speech.” In a post just yesterday, I published the actual European statute that will send anyone guilty of spreading “hate speech” or “conspiracy theories” online to “re-education camps.”

Define “Hate Speech”: That which does not conform with liberal ideology.

In the first video below, TruthUnveiled discusses a decision released on Tuesday, May 31st, 2016, by the European Commission along with the "IT Companies" (YouTube, Twitter, Facebook, and Microsoft) released a press release, announcing what they call a "code of conduct" regarding "illegal online hate speech." Such preventive measures would be taken within 24 hours of anything deemed "hate speech" online: including racism, xenophobia, and/or any posts related to the matter.

Naturally, none of the "hate speech crusaders" mention that too much discussion of conservative values like the Constitution, individual rights, God, life, or the Second Amendment classify as "hate speech." Well, after posting a video yesterday discussing a press conference Obama held on May 31st (See the video here), I can confirm they are serious, because my advertising privileges on Facebook were revoked. Take a look:

Your ad account has been flagged for policy violations. Any ads you're running have been removed. Please review our Community Standards and make sure your content complies. If you have questions, please contact us.

To show how asinine this is, and what a witch hunt this whole "hate speech" farce is against conservatives and free speech in general, may I mention that Facebook employees personally approved all of my ads prior to running them, and then they come back after the fact and revoked my privileges? Seriously Zuckerberg? Second of all, Facebook didn't even blink at the $500-$700 a month I spend in advertising, and they gave no warning. Poof! The following video talks a bit about what happened, and the new European laws to send people to re-education camps for spreading "hate speech" or "conspiracy theories." Why? Because it's coming here next. There are FORTY TWO links at the bottom confirming everything I say...

For people who paid close attention to the Jade Helm Martial Law “exercises” last summer, anyone who followed closely was concerned with much more than mere hardware movements that could be seen taking place all summer. Those of us paying attention were hooked by the title of the exercises, “Operation Jade Helm: Mapping the Human Domain.”

In military terminology, “the human domain,” or “the human domain analytics,” refers to anything dealing with people. The battlefield of the future is not going to be between Nation states, rather there is literally a war on for your mind. It’s going to be about “Total Information Awareness.” He that controls information, controls... PERIOD!

Companies like Facebook, Twitter, Google, and Microsoft have become obsessed with controlling who gets what information. They are no longer conduits for free speech, but the mechanisms being used to silence Free Speech. As proof of how corrupt Facebook is, and how there are no “rules,” I offer a copy of an email I’ve sent no less than 100 times (basically every time I get suspended). As you can see I make it very clear I want to follow the rules, simply tell me what they are. Of course Facebook won’t do that, because then they couldn’t ban people at will... for no reason.

Re: Reminder: Survey about your Facebook Advertising Experience

[REDACTED]

As one of Facebook's "most valuable advertisers," why is it that every time I ask for Facebook's policy on posting in groups, so I am certain I am not in violation of it, none of my emails are responded to?

Once again, on Tuesday at 9:30pm I was restricted from posting in groups until tonight at 9:30pm. Repeatedly during my suspension, I was flooded with emails asking where I am, and why I'm not posting, including from group moderators, so it's clearly Facebook that is arbitrarily preventing me from sharing, not complaints from the groups I am in.

Facebook obviously has a policy in place that there can only be "X" number of shares per hour/day/group or something to that effect. It's deliberately not included in the terms and conditions or the Community Guidelines. I'd love to increase my spending to $750 in coming months and keep going higher, but I am always dealing with suspensions.

Let me be clear: I want to follow all Facebook's guidelines, so why won't Facebook simply tell me what the policy is, and what is permitted, so I can make sure my posting fits within your requirements? If I didn't know better, I'd say the policy has been deliberately masked in murky language so that Facebook can block me at will because it may disagree with my viewpoint.

Google isn't much better. Not that long ago I posted a video which can be found here, where I went after the New World Order and their stranglehold over global monetary policy. Immediately, the video was removed, and I was threatened with my entire YouTube account being terminated.

ATTENTION

As you may know, our Community Guidelines describe which content we allow – and don't allow – on YouTube. Your video "What Exactly Does Global Economic Collapse Coming May 2016 Mean" was flagged for review. Upon review, we've determined that it violates our guidelines. We've removed it from YouTube and assigned a Community Guidelines strike, or temporary penalty, to your account.

The impact of strikes

This is the first strike applied to your account. We understand that users seldom intend to violate our policies. That's why strikes don't last forever – if you don't receive another strike for six months, your initial strike will expire. However, it's important to remember that additional strikes could prevent you from posting content to YouTube or even lead to your account being terminated.

How you can respond

If you believe this was a mistake, we'd like to hear from you. Please follow both of these steps as simply deleting the video won't resolve the strike on your account.

- The next time you sign in you will be asked to acknowledge this strike on your account.
- If you would like to appeal this strike, please visit the Video Manager section of your channel. Our team will thoroughly review your appeal and will contact you again very soon.

Thankfully, that all happened when Facebook was taking so much heat for censoring conservatives as a result of the article in Gizmodo, so I politely wrote back telling Google to either tell me specifically what rule I violated, otherwise they were instructed to put my video back up or I'd call Gizmodo, and then begin trying to plan a massive class action lawsuit against companies like them, Facebook, Twitter, etc.

Sean Adl-Tabatabai writes:

Facebook, Twitter, YouTube and Microsoft have officially partnered with the European Commission in order to crack down on free speech by banning “alternative media” from their platforms.

The European Commission announced their partnership with Facebook and other social media giants on Tuesday, saying they have ordered these internet giants to completely eliminate “hate speech” and “counter-narratives” from the internet.

Members of the European Parliament have criticized the new partnership as being **Orwellian** in nature, warning that the move will effectively see alternative media die online.

The EU released its Big Brother-style “code of conduct” on Tuesday, which “includes a series of commitments to combat the spread of illegal hate speech online in Europe … together with Facebook, Twitter, YouTube and Microsoft,” who have agreed to comply.

Breitbart.com reports:

The commitments include “educat[ing] and rais[ing] awareness with their users” and building a “network” of “trusted reporters” to flag unwanted content.

Facebook and Twitter are to provide “regular training to their staff on current societal developments” and work more closely with national governments and “their law enforcement agencies” to remove content the EU does not favor.

Most alarmingly, however, the platforms have also promised to engage in the active promotion of views and organisations the EU does favour, and the re-education of supposedly hateful users.

Facebook and others must, “recogniz[e] the value of independent counter speech against hateful rhetoric and prejudice, aim to continue their work in identifying and promoting independent counter-narratives, new ideas and initiatives and supporting educational programs that encourage critical thinking.”

Janice Atkinson MEP told Breitbart London:

“The Commission has been itching to shut down free speech in the Parliament and now they’re attacking social media. We have already seen Facebook ‘policing’ so-called right-wing postings.

“If an MEP, such as the centre-right Hungarians, the Danish People’s Party, the Finns, the Swedish Democrats, the Austrian FPO, say no to migration quotas because they cannot cope with the cultural and religious requirements of Muslims across the Middle East who are seeking refugee status, is that a hate crime? And what is their punishment? It’s a frightening path to totalitarianism.”

UKIP’s Justice and Home Affairs spokeswoman Diane James MEP told Breitbart London:

“This legislation is so vague that it is the thin end of the wedge not just curb hate speech but free speech as well.

“Different people and cultures across Europe have different ways of communicating. The Liberal tradition in Britain for instance is more open and very different from that of dictatorial former Communist countries in the East.

“The EU was sold to people as a Common Market, it became a political union and now wishes to decide and compromise our civil liberties as a people. This is unacceptable to a free people who have a right to know where all this legislation is leading to.

“The EU was sold to people as a Common Market, it became a political union and now wishes to decide and compromise our civil liberties as a people. This is unacceptable to a free people who have a right to know where all this legislation is leading to.

“In my opinion, if the EU still allows to me have an opinion, I believe this matter should be decided by national parliaments rather than the unelected European Commission.”

The Code of Conduct has also been slammed by groups who have been working closely with the Commission. In a sign of an impending backlash, one organisation which promotes privacy, data protection, and net neutrality has already vowed to break ties.

The European Digital Rights (EDRi) announced its decision to pull out of future discussions with the Commission today, stating it does not have confidence in the “ill-considered code of conduct”.

“Faced with this lamentable outcome, and with no possibility to provide meaningful input to this process, the Commission has left us with no other choice but to withdraw from the discussion,” said Estelle Massé, EU Policy Analyst at Access Now.

“It is ironic that the Commission is threatening to take Member States to court for failing to implement EU law on racism and xenophobia while it is persuading companies like Google and Facebook to sweep offences under the carpet,” added Joe McNamee, Executive Director at European Digital Rights.

Monika Bickert, Head of Global Policy Management at Facebook, said:

“We welcome today’s announcement and the chance to continue our work with the Commission and wider tech industry to fight hate speech.”

The “criminalizing [of] hate speech is dependent on a robust system of enforcement of criminal law sanctions against the individual perpetrators of hate speech” the Commission declares.

Insisting that, “it is essential to ensure that relevant national laws” are used to combat “racism and xenophobia are fully enforced by Member States”.

Furthermore, “illegal hate speech online” must be “expeditiously reviewed by online intermediaries and social media platforms” within a short “time-frame”.

Last September, German Chancellor Angela Merkel was overheard confronting Facebook founder Mark Zuckerberg about “hate speech”, with Mr. Zuckerberg replying: “We need to do some work.”

Now, the EU has described how:

"The IT Companies support the European Commission and EU Member States... They share, together with other platforms and social media companies, a collective responsibility and pride in promoting and facilitating freedom of expression throughout the online world."

The Commission argues that expanding censorship will somehow protect and expand free speech, because "[hate speech] negatively impacts those who speak out for freedom, tolerance and non-discrimination in our open societies and has a chilling effect on the democratic discourse on online platforms."

Věra Jourová, EU Commissioner for Justice, Consumers and Gender Equality, said the new measures would counter Islamist terrorism:

"The recent terror attacks have reminded us of the urgent need to address illegal online hate speech. Social media is unfortunately one of the tools that terrorist groups use to radicalise young people and racist use to spread violence and hatred."

Example of Facebook censorship at its finest

Example of Facebook censorship at its finest

Twitter's Head of Public Policy for Europe, Karen White, said:

“Hateful conduct has no place on Twitter... We look forward to further constructive dialogue between the European Commission, member states, our partners in civil society and our peers in the technology sector on this issue.”
