

Sally Quillan Yates
Deputy Attorney General
U.S. Department of Justice
9/10/2015

Sally:

I am sure you have seen the attached communication and are, by now, intimately familiar with this matter.

We taxpaying U.S. voters, who are individuals and U.S. small business owners, got shafted in the butt by these White House campaign finance competitors.

We don't know if you are Obama's best buddy, or not, but it should not matter. In the media, you sound like a reasonable person. The public, and the media, are applauding your new approach to kick corporate corruption on a very personal level. Crime is crime. Nobody gets to get away with it.

It should not matter that White House aids and financiers are telling DOJ to "wait until after the elections", or to "stonewall this". We don't care, take as long as you want hauling in the bad guys.

What can YOU, Sally, do to help us citizens right now, though? All of our resources have been cut off by these attacks because we helped you guys.

A little help, in return; please.

Keep up the ass-kicking of the dirty deal guys.

Best.

The Team!

Enclosure: Big Letter

CC: Robin C. Ashton

BCC: Everybody